Richard Henry Construction

“Customers come to us with pictures and ideas and it is our job to make it a reality.”

Think Pocono vacation home and a basic little A-frame, complete with wood-paneled walls, may come to mind. But toss the phrase around with Mike Dembinski, Director of Sales & Marketing at Richard Henry Construction, and words like “mountain elegance” and “custom craftsmanship” become part of the mix.

Since 1990 Richard Henry, a construction and remodeling company, has been putting a sophisticated spin on the rustic feel of many vacation homes, not to mention primary residences, in fantastic Pocono locations. Building in and around Lake Naomi & Timber Trails, complete with a spectacular 47,000 Square Foot Community Center set on 29-Acres and boasting 7 sandy beaches, the company has seen great success in knock-down and original construction. Richard Henry's most recent project, Kuehner Field Estates located in Kunkletown, Pa., will offer craftsman style homes built to suit. “I don't think Richard Henry has even built the same house twice,” claimed Dembinski as we toured one of their pristine, lake hugging Adirondack Homes. Beyond just a log cabin, the magnificent two-story residence, with a spacious floor plan and luxurious finishes, conjures something along the lines of a warm and sophisticated woodland retreat.

Care for eco-chic wood flooring made from repurposed wood barn panels? How about an option for turnkey service throughout your weekend stay? Richard Henry has you covered. “Customers come to us with pictures and ideas and it is our job to make it a reality” explained Dembinski, an attribute perhaps most evident in their keen attention to detail. Using their in-house drafting and interior design departments they work to address the overall feel of a home, often adding to the mix projects that require the expertise of local businesses. With Richard Henry Construction on your side, gone is the “beige-box” feel of your new construction. “We try to think of everything,” exclaimed Dembinski, “it is part of giving people a whole package.” ✱
